The north-east - calm and modern

This part of the island belongs to the Llevant region, the Majorcan word for sunrise. Gorgeous beaches, romantic almond groves and old houses in the country make up this region, along with lively seaside resorts, excellent golf courses and a host of leisure time facilities. Both those in search of peace and quiet and sports enthusiasts will find what they are looking for here. This is where the old Majorca meets the culture of the modern island: century-old buildings and olive trees blend in with stylish cafés, miles of beach promenades under palm trees and beach clubs to chill out in.

The fishing village of Porto Cristo is surrounded by lively, charming spots like Cala Millor, Cala Ratjada or Capdepera. Their small, sheltered bays make them particularly appealing for families. Thanks to the modern transport connections and the proximity to the capital, Palma, which is only 40 minutes away, properties in this region are much sought-after and market values are considered to be extremely stable.
